Houston, TX – February 13, 2008 – Today's Business Solutions announced that it will launch its new ordering platform on Monday, March 31st. With this system, all of Today's customers will have additional options for ordering and easier access to reporting capabilities.

"Today's Business Solutions is very excited to introduce our new, more quality-focused ordering system because it has the power to significantly enhance the experience we deliver to our end-users," said Robert Jimenez, president, Today's Business Solutions. "With this important piece in place it will allow us to more effectively connect businesses, customers, products, services and information."

Progress continues to be made with the new ordering platform as the next step in a persistent plan that includes new systems, increased space and additional staff.

The new system will automate internal processes and improve management oversight. This will help Today's Business Solutions realize significant cost reductions which can be passed on to the customer. Benefits include faster inventory turns, a more efficient supply chain and streamlined purchasing functions.

Building on existing capabilities, the upcoming release will expand the system with new solutions for managing customer data, preferences, contracts and buying history.
